

THE COSMOPOLITAN - A PLACE FOR ALL REASONS

A place for SHOPPING

J.T.Hall, General Store-keeper, and great uncle of Ian French, rented premises in the double storey section of the Cosmo between 1889 and 1892. A wide range of goods was sold. Mr. Hall's wife and daughter both died during the time that the family was living in the rooms above the shop. These businesses have not operated for many years.

A Butcher, Mr.W. Kelly, occupied a small, separate section of the building beside the General Store. ▲
The butcher's shop remains almost intact in 2010.

J. T. HALL

GENERAL STOREKEEPER.

▲ The General Store, displaying a wide range of goods. The Butcher shop on the right.

The metal rails on which the meat was once hung remain in place.